

IRR CLM888 – Expand 02 considerations to address confusion around Wage DN's

Background: Wage (DN0062) is FROI and Average Wage (DN0286) is SROI. Some Claim Administrators derive it from the same source. After discussion at the Claims Committee meeting in San Diego, the committee agrees that a paragraph should be added to section 4 to recommend that Wage be an Add on a FROI and Update on a SROI.

Proposed Resolution

Page 4.44 under Considerations for Requiring a 02 Change:

11. Wage (DN0062) is on the FROI and Average Wage (DN0286) is on the SROI. It is recommended that DN0062 Wage on a FROI should be only be an Add or Update (only if a SROI has not been filed) and DN0286 Average Wage on a SROI should only be an Add, Update, or Remove. Claim Administrators should be aware that DN0063 Wage Period Code can change along with DN0062 Wage or DN0286 Average Wage. Both the amount (DN0062 or DN0286) and the Wage Period Code may be reported on the same 02 Change transaction when applicable.

“J” on element requirement table for DN62 and DN286 with an exception.

Code J = Required Change by Transaction Type. This code only applies to Data Elements contained on both the FROI and SROI, and the jurisdiction is collecting them on both. When indicated in the Reportable Change Column for Add, Update, Remove, or Delete, the Claim Administrator shall send a 02 Change on either the SROI only if a SROI has been previously accepted. If no SROI has been previously accepted then a FROI 02 Change is required. (See Code Usage Limitations below)

Exception: Wage (DN0062) is on the FROI and Average Wage (DN0286) is on the SROI. The SROI is considered to be the most recent value and any changes should be reported on the SROI in DN0286 Average Wage when a SROI has been previously filed. Refer to item #11 under Considerations for Requiring a 02 Change.
